ABOUT ME

They call me kmf (because they don't know how to pronounce Karen Mellott-Foshier). A former hockey mom entering my fourth year as an emptynester, I recently resigned from corporate life after 25+ years as a journalist, corporate communications manager, writer and editor.

I'm all about the experience with my family and friends, but equally love my solo trips to recharge, as well as my quest for the best adult mac and cheese and recommending my favorite books.

I've been microblogging about my travel adventures on social media for more than a decade so am excited to share my knowledge and travel tips, and inspire others to make memories around the world or discover hidden gems in their own backyard.

Why work with me

I launched my blog mid-2019. While my following is modest, my engagement is growing organically every day. I provide authentic and genuine content that people can trust. And I'm reliable and timely - you will not be disappointed with my turnaround, rich content and stunning photos to tell your story.

When I'm in, I'm all in.
